AN ITEM FROM PURGATORY VALLEY.
DENVER, Dec. 23.—A Times special from Trinidad says: On Sunday George McComber and W. W. Wearthing attempted to rob a storekeeper named Morgan, at Georgetown in Purgatory valley. Morgan was holding up his hands, when, instead of being shot, he was turned to reach for a revolver. McComber then shot him in the back. Morgan's clerk, who came to his assistance, was also shot and severely wounded. The two men then fled, but were followed to Trinidad and traced to a house of ill-repute by the sheriff and a posse of 10 o'clock morning. An attempt was made to kill them when a light caught the sheriff's posse lighting the house with bullets. McComber was shot through the right lung. He is still alive and says that he shot himself to avoid capture. Wearthing gave himself up.

CHRISTMAS-TIDE.

Service at Trinity Episcopal Church. The Christmas-his services at Trinity church have been beautiful and interesting. They began Christmas eve, with a service which showed forth in scripture, hymn, carol and sermon, the event of "that first Christmas night." The church is very pretty in its decorations, dainty wreaths of Princess pine, fragrant hollyhock boughs with the word "Emmanuel" above the altar and a gilded star wreathed with evergreen hanging from each chandelier in the body of the church. Evening prayer was choral, and was rendered with warmth and vivacity. The sermon was from the text "All generations shall call me blessed," and drew lessons of humility, bravery and self-forgetfulness from the submission of the Mother of our Lord. The choir was reinforced by some old members who were home for the holidays. Christmas morning the morning prayer began at 10:30. After a brilliant organ voluntary, the men and boys of the choir entered, singing, "Hark! What Mean These Holy Voices," making, in their symbolic white robes, a picture satisfying alike the sense of the beautiful and the feeling of reverence. Morning prayer was said as usual, with the exception of the spirited chanting by the rector and choir of the Psalter for the day. The choral communion service began with the intoning by the rector, in smooth rich tone of the collect before the Communion, and was sung with devotion and accuracy. Too much praise cannot be given Mr. W. C. Conover, the conductor of the choir, for the finished manner in which the service was arranged and rendered. The boys' full voices and precise tones represented indefatigable labor on his part and theirs. The organist, Mrs. B. A. Doty, is also to be congratulated upon her graceful and effective manner in which she performed that most difficult task of accompanying a choral service. The whole choir by their attention, earnestness and skill gave a service which would be a credit and delight to any congregation in the land. The subject of the sermon was The Babe of Bethlehem, and was an admirable showing forth of the power of the weak babe found lying in a manger. This service was repeated on Sunday with the exception of the hymns which were appropriate to St. Stephen's day, and a touching discourse from the rector from the text "There was no room for them in the Inn." At 7 o'clock P. M. evening prayer was sung. The first Psalm of the Psalter 80, was well sung to a Gregorian tone with a striking change to a minor cadence at verse 37. The voice in the Benedictus Anna were sung sweetly and clearly by Master Frank Parsons, Ed. Hancock and Edward Davis. Percy Hancock, the youngest member of the choir, sang in the morning a brief solo in the creed with full voice and precision. The duet in the offertory anthem was sung by Torvald Hoyland and Harry Kanous. The boy who was to have sung the beautiful solo failed to come to the service, but was kindly substituted by Miss Grace R. Conover, whose solo, with no preparation at all to his playing, was very successful. The evening service was an eloquent demonstration sermon was an eloquent demonstration that Christmas is nothing save as the birthday of the incarnate son of God. Sunday afternoon the Sunday school had their Christmas service. They entered the rear of the church preceded by the Banner Class (Miss Ida Fox, teacher) bearing the banner, singing "Hark! What Mean These Holy Voices." The school was animated, and joined with spirit in singing the choral service and beautiful carols. They recited a well learned lesson in response to the rector's questioning on the meaning of Christmas and Christ's coming, and listened to a delightful sermon from him. Mr. W. C. Conover played the organ. The Sunday school is large and interested. They have recently sent a box valued at $50 to two colored Sunday schools in South Carolina.
